Catching Your Wild Mind: The Practice of Zhine in the Bon Tradition

A three-day practice retreat with Gabriel Rocco

The meditation practice of zhine, often translated from the Tibetan as "calm abiding," develops the ability to catch one's mind and develop concentration and focus. Rather than having your wild mind control you, you gain control of your mind. This year the zhine retreat is being offered to support beginning, intermediate, and experienced meditators; Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche encourages all his students to attend, as well as people who are new to the teachings of Tibetan Bon Buddhism.

The ngondro teachings, a complete set of practices in themselves, offer instructions for “taming” oneself, for purifying, and for perfecting; and are the prerequisite for further study of the Experiential Transmission of Zhang Zhung.

Sleep of Clear Light: The Practice of Sleep Yoga

With Geshe Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche

Centuries ago, Tibetan yogis developed the practice of sleep yoga to transform these dark hours of ignorance into a path toward enlightenment. A powerful tool for awakening, sleep yoga is more than a practice of the night. It helps us to integrate all moments — waking, sleeping, meditation, and even death — with the clear light of awareness. During this intensive five-day retreat, Geshe Tenzin Wangyal Rinpoche will teach and guide us in the clear-light sleep practices of the Mother Tantra, one of the most important cycles of teachings in the Tibetan Bon Buddhist tradition
