News From Chamma Ling Retreat Center in Colorado

Community House Nearing Completion

Do you know about Chamma Ling, Ligmincha Institute's Retreat Center that is being developed in the mountains of Crestone, Colo.? It is open to all as a support for serious practitioners.

In the current second stage of development of Chamma Ling, a Community House is being built. Its purpose is twofold: to provide a space for small group practice retreats and to serve the support needs of retreatants in future cabins higher up into the mountains.

When Chamma Ling provides small practice retreats for groups of 25 or fewer, a place is needed for all to gather for meals, as well as bath house facilities and a library/office. The new Community House will provide an organizational center for people to check in and simple quarters for a retreat coordinator.
